David Elliott and Mehitable Aldrich

HUSBAND:

David ELLIOTT. [PC M3]

David was born on 3 March 1716 in (Sutton-S1,S7) (Uxbridge-S6), Worcester County, Massachusetts; son of Daniel ELLIOTT and Sarah PROVENDER.

He is found in Beekman Patent papers, removing to Dutchess County New York once the Indian wars had decreased. Fought in the Rev war. He married Mehitable ALDRICH on 20 (29-S4) December 1739 in Uxbridge, Worcester County, Massachusetts. {S4}.

They had lived in Duxbury, Massachusetts.

He was of the Oblong, Dutchess County, New York by about 1757. (S4).
They moved to New York about 1758 or 1759. {S5}.

The eastern portion of Putnam county is a strip of land one mile, three quarters and twenty rods wide. This strip is a portion of what is known as the "Oblong" or "Equivalent Lands." The boundary between the Dutch colony of New Amsterdam and the English colony of Connecticut was in the very earliest times a source of contention. On the 1 December 1664 an agreement was made by which the boundaries between New York and Connecticut were fixed. An error in the intended boundary lines occurred when it was found that the line would cross the Hudson River below West Point. An agreement was made on 24 November 1683 which established the present boundary. On the east side of the line a tract was to be laid off equal in acres to the amount yielded to Connecticut on the shores of the Sound. This tract was called the "Equivalent Lands" and the boundary was to be on its eastern-most side, with the tract containin 61,440 acres. Owing to the fact that settlers could buy these lands, they were settled at an early day, and the "Oblong" was the original Southeast Precinct and had many inhabitants. (S8).

David ELLIOTT was on the tax list of Beekman, Dutchess County, New York from 1761 to 1769. (S4).

David moved to Pawling, New York. (S4).

David ELLIOTT was on the tax list of Pawling Town, Dutchess County, New York from 1771 to 1774. (S4).

David and his family moved to Kingsbury prior to the Revolutionary War, coming from Dover, New York. They settled on Kingsbury Street (the Street). When Burgoyne came, they went back to Dutchess County. After the capture of Burgoyne's army they came back to their possessions in Kingsbury. They found their log building burned, and a large quantity of grain and other property missing. (S9).

David died 11 MAY 1798 in Kingsbury, Washington County, New York; and was buried in Kingsbury. Tombstones of David and his wife in Kingsbury were reported as readable in 1967 by Marshall E. Lignian, Sr. (S7).
